

Liquid Alternative, Multi Asset Solutions: Managing portfolios in a Post-Covid 19 World

Multi-Asset strategies will have to adjust to a changed post-crisis world. Unwinding the massive amount of liquidity injected into markets to combat the virus will be very tricky. Governments will be even more indebted than before. Can inflation be the answer to the world's debt problem? How can investors find diversification in a world where government bond yields are converging towards zero? Will the crisis accelerate deglobalisation? All these questions will take time to play out: how can macro investors adapt? We think a flexible and active approach can best manage through this extraordinary period.

Jupiter Asset Management

Founded in London in 1985, Jupiter is an established asset manager with an increasing presence in Europe and Asia. As we have grown, our strong culture has been essential in keeping our entrepreneurial, talent-driven spirit. We believe in active fund management, working together to share investment ideas, yet ensuring our fund managers take individual responsibility for their own portfolios. For over thirty years, we have actively sought to make a positive difference to our clients' funds. Today we have over €50,8 billion (as at 30.09.19) in assets under management. We offer a broad range of actively managed investment strategies to suit a variety of investor needs, including equities, bonds, multi-asset and absolute return.

Matthew Morgan

Matthew Morgan joined Jupiter in 2019 as a Senior Product Specialist for the Multi-Asset team.

Before joining Jupiter, Matthew worked at BlackRock, most recently as a Director in the UK institutional sales team where he had lead responsibility for BlackRock's relationships with a range of large UK institutions, and also had strategic responsibility for Multi-Asset.

Matthew has a degree from Oxford in History and Modern Languages and is a CFA® charter holder.
